Tutoring Experience

With 14 years of tutoring experience, I've worked with students across IB, A-Level, and GCSE curriculums, focusing on psychology and social sciences. I began my teaching journey as a homeroom teacher, which gave me valuable insight into understanding student needs and helping them thrive academically. My career has taken me from classrooms in the UK to international settings, providing a global perspective to my teaching.

Throughout my experience, I've supported students with exam preparation, research projects, and Extended Essays, helping them achieve top results. I specialise in breaking down complex psychological concepts and ensuring students can apply them effectively in exams and coursework. Watching my students grow academically and personally continues to be the most rewarding aspect of my career.
